$1.00 PER YEAR.

LOCALS :

J.A. Bowers was with us again for a couple of days this week.

o o o

The firemen's dance did not receive as much public support as would naturally have been expected. It just seemed as if the people did not care to dance. However, those who did attend enjoyed themselves to the fullest capacity. Coming on Friday night and right after the dance at Travers, perhaps had the effect of keeping away a number from a distance. The Peace Club did a very nice business at providing lunch and refreshments.

o o o

Mr. Johnson and Miss Teskey of Okotoks spent the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Teskey.

o o o

Travellers Superintendent Terry of the Ogilvie Company is in town this week with a gang of repair men, fixing up the local house in readiness for the big crop.

o o o

The Armada U.F.A. is putting on a big dance in John Urdal's barn on Friday evening, June 13th. The Lomond Orchestra has been engaged to furnish the music and a good crowd is expected to go out from town. There will be a box social in connection and all ladies are requested to come provided with boxes of luncheon dainties. The dance is held as a benefit towards the erection of the new U.F.A. Hall at Armada.

o o o

This week THE PRESS put out the posters for the great celebration to be held in Enchant July 1st. One of the main attractions of the day will be the presence of Mr. Wood, provincial president of the U.F.A., who will deliver one of his customary interesting addresses on vital farmer issues of the day. There will be a big base ball tournament with a hundred dollar purse. The Lomond Band will be there with brass polished.

o o o

Rev. Bell is in Calgary attending the session of conference. Rev. Bird of Bow City also went up on Thursday.

o o o

The meeting called for the consideration of the advisability of holding a day of sport in Lomond this year did not materialize. The wind was too much for the citizens to brave. However, as the fair is coming early this year and there is a big program of sports on their line-up this town won't be considered in the background. Travers will likely be in running with a day about the middle of July and between the Fudhant day and their's Lomond would not have much chance of an open date.

o o o

The nerves of south Albertans were sorely tried on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, when one of the worst wind storms ever experienced since the arrival of the pioneers remained in visitation upon us. We just had to grin and bear it—though a good many gave to their feelings in a more expressive manner. Apart from the trying ordeal it is stated that in some sections of the country where the soil is light and sandy the grain is literally blown out of the ground, while we in this part of the country have to be content to see ours being destroyed by the worms. In the afternoon on Tuesday the force of the wind became spent and on Wednesday the sky lowered for storm. It kept stringing us along with an occasional light shower until Thursday night, when the real thing broke loose at last. This is the first rain that could be said to have any particular influence on the crop situation, and things are sure away to a good start now.

o o o

Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province has received notice from the Live Stock Branch at Ottawa that cattle moved north last year on account of the scarcity of feed in the south will require to be loaded on or before the 10th. day of June in order to get the free rate for the return of cattle to the south.

o o o

The local police officer has received instructions on the disposal of fallen stock. It is the duty of the owners of the stock to properly dispose of same. Where identification is impossible the municipal district or provincial authorities must look after the same.

o o o

Lomond team plays in Travers on the 5th. Rain shut out the playing for this week.

o o o

Mrs. Barber of Calgary has been spending the week with her daughter, Mrs. St. John. Her son who was but recently demobilized from the Canadian forces is taking over the management of the Associated Farmers in place of R. W. Miller, resigned.

o o o

W. M. Armstrong took out the road making machinery this week to start on building a grade up the west bank of the valley. It is desirable as far as possible to hire only ratepayer farmer outfits, so any who desire to sign up should see him without delay.

H. E. Elves' parents from Cayley visited with him for a couple of days this week.

A Treatise on Home Roads

Jas. McNaughton, M.L.A., accompanied by Malcolm Calder, inspector of roads for the Department of Public Works, in Lomond on Saturday conferring on the matter of road improvements, as spoken of in THE PRESS several times before.

To begin with they are not very well satisfied with the way the improvements made a couple of years ago were allowed to go to ruin for the want of a little grading and repairing. The road running north and south from town and the road running east is just now in a disgraceful state of repair and never have been touched since the grader left it. It certainly seems like poor business. There is little to be gained by laying out capital expenditure on roads from year to year if repairs are to be entirely waived and they are allowed to go back to the primitive state and worse, and the repair work should be the first work of the council responsible in each and every year. Keep what you have got and add improvements as circumstances permit.

Of course there is one feature where the government men catch us wrong. It really is our money they are spending and even should we fail to get value for it through our negligence, the government has no just right to withhold any further appropriations. The auto licences alone would more than cover the usual appropriations. We will grant them the liberty of jacking us up whenever and wherever they see fit.

These men are coming back and hope to bring with them the Public Works Minister, Mr. McLean, when the plan will be gone into thoroughly. What the Board of Trade would like to see done is further work on the road north to the lease, about two thousand dollars on the blind line running east from town in the first two miles and the re-grading and dragging of the main road between here and Bow City, to say nothing of numerous other things that will come to the consideration of the councillors in their regular rounds of supervision.

LABOR IN TROUBLE

Calgary, Medicine Hat and Edmonton labor parties have all called themselves out in sympathy with the strikers in Winnipeg. The strike has become a menace to the general public under the supervision of the individuals now in control. There is no good reason why business all over Western Canada should be demoralized because a few hundred employees of a certain factory cannot get all the consideration they want right off the reel. There is no reason why the postal privileges, the newspaper privileges, as well as many other privileges in order to force an agreement upon certain corporations.

It would be just as logical for the Western Canada farmer to go on strike and not harvest his grain just because the government did not guarantee five dollars a bushel for wheat.

Labor has a grievance. Labor has never seen the equitable distribution of the profits it has produced. But, on the other hand, it has never assumed any of the responsibility of loss. Right here lies the secret of the situation. If we can advance our social system to such an extent that we can agree with labor to take chances on the outcome of industry, then the time will come when capital will have to come down off its perch and divvy up the excess profits. It would be a good thing for labor too. It would create an incentive towards giving full value in effort during the hours employed.

The Sunlight Soap people, National Cash Register people, and Henry Ford have paved the way towards solving the labor problem. You never hear of strikes in these factories, nor are there any institutions in operation and existence that can compare with them for efficiency in operation. They pay the highest wages, hire the greatest percentage of skilled labor and pay the highest dividends.

People have come to expect so much from governments. We blame the governments for this, that and the other thing. But we cannot help but feel that the government is much to blame for the present situation. With the cost of living more than double what it was four years ago, it stands to reason that the laboring classes could not subsist on the old time wage scale. In many cases voluntary increases have been given to meet the demands of the situation, but in the majority of instances the wage has not kept pace with the advance in cost of the necessities of life. Wheat, the farmers product, was the only commodity to come under the medium of price control. Even on this the manufacturers make a huge margin of profit through turning it into flour. If it is possible to control the price of wheat, it must be possible to control the price of binders. If the labor market is to be brought out from under this spirit of unrest it must be given some measure of guarantee somewhere and be protected from exploitation on the part of the people who only desire to pile more money on top of what they already have.

If government intervention is necessary to control labor disturbances, the time for that influence to be felt it before a strike is called. It is a black mark of inefficiency against our Canadian authorities to allow such conditions to arise before official steps were taken to alleviate the cause of the trouble.

In the meantime the cities affected are operating public utilities through voluntary assistance of citizens. The strikers have lost a good bit of the public sympathy through tying up the postal service and the other public conveniences.

NOTES

Don't you feel the change in relations since the rain started?

o o o

Are you in sympathy with the sympathetic strike? Savors pretty much Prussian and Russian to us. It will require careful handling to avert serious relations. To THE PRESS the whole affair is a bungle. Labor has bungled the management of the strike and the government has bungled in the administration of mediation. The general public does not consider the principle involved of sufficient significance to justify the present demoralization of industry. In this lies the strikers' weakness. Proper leadership on behalf of both factions concerned would have averted all chance of a strike.

If this is a country of extremes, it should be extremely wet now for awhile, for it sure has been extremely dry for a couple of years.

o o o

Bobbie Harper says that rain is not the only moisture that would be welcomed in Alberta.

o o o

Judging from the fact that Germans are demanding protection for the Kaiser in their counter proposals on the peace terms, one is inclined to think that the Germans are still Germans, and still running true to our conception of the misnomer.

o o o

Of nothing does Lomond feel the lack more than a suitable public hall. There is a decided call for an up-to-date amusement and assembly hall. There should be an opening here for a movie man and side issues would provide a guarantee of a profit on a reasonable investment.

o o o

The U.F.A. is holding political conventions all over the province to inaugurate a farmers' political organization. Now, if the farmers think that they as a class can swing things their own way, they are sure a misguided lot. As soon as the chief executive announced a "closed shop" we felt in our bones that it was "Fare You Well, Brother Watkins." A better plan would be to construct a platform of their own, let in as many people as would support them, and peddle their influence at Ottawa to the party that will guarantee to stand on their platform.

o o o

McNaughton says he authorized appropriations on the north road for last summer through A. C. Little. Little says not. So we have concluded that we have been talking about one road while the Honorable Member was thinking of another.

CHECKING UP THE INCOME TAX RETURNS

A large number of returns for the year 1918 have been filed with the Inspector of Taxation for the Province, but it is felt that there a number of persons whose incomes are sufficient to render them liable to taxation who have not yet filed returns. These must be filed "without demand or notice" according to the provisions of the Income War Tax Act. This does not appear to be generally known and it seems some persons are of the opinion that they are only required to file returns only when forms are sent to them to do so. This is entirely wrong. All persons liable to taxation must get forms for themselves, either by applying at the nearest Post Office; or at the Office of the Inspector of Taxation, Customs Building Calgary.

Step being taken to trace any defaulters. The penalties provided for in the act are not yet being imposed and an opportunity if still being given to those who are liable under the act, and those who have failed to comply with it to file returns. There is no doubt, however that before long prosecutions will be made, and it is, therefore, important that no risks be taken, and that all whom the act may effect should see that they are not incurring any penalty.

There are many misunderstandings as to what income consists of. Amongst some of the smaller merchants and others there is an impression that profit earned and left in the business is not income. This is wrong. Whether such profit is withdrawn or left in the business it is an income and should, therefore, be taken into account as such. It is also sound that some people engaged in farming or business, regard capital expenditures and operating expenses alike, as deductions from gross income. Care should be taken to see that this is not done, and that all expenditures of a capital nature are left out of account when arriving at income.

How does your dollar stand?

Gallant Young Italian

Caught Teutons Napping And Scored a Triumph

ABOUT the time the invading Austro-German army reached the Piave river, the Germans had their newspapers say that the Austrian navy was going to do something, and more specifically, that two battleships which had been in the harbor of Trieste for so long that grounding on their own beef bones seemed imminent, would really come out and help the Huns take Venice.

Just how that was to be done was not explained, nor was it made clear in what way the much more powerful Italian dreadnoughts, which were still persistently lingering in the vicinity of the port, were to be disposed of. The two ships selected for the task, the Wien and the Monarch, were sister vessels of 5,512 tons each, built in 1895; but this pair having never done anything were well preserved, and while they both could, of course, be easily annihilated by the Italian Giulio Cesare, for example, long before they could get near enough to the Cesare for their guns to reach her, still they might be formidable against gondolas.

Meanwhile the Italian aviators in going to and from their regular daily job of dropping bombs on the Austrian ships in Pola and Fiume had observed that the Wien and the Monarch were in a slip between two of the three long piers which jut into the harbor of Trieste, that not only were they protected by mine fields and fortifications, but that no less than eight steel cables were stretched across the entrance of the slip. Furthermore, to these cables were connected mines liable to blow up if the cables were unduly jarred by collision with them.

Then followed not only the most daring single naval episode of the war, but an achievement of distinct military importance, and not to be dismissed solely with the usual tributes to personal gallantry. A dark and misty night was selected for the work. From the division of Italian torpedo boats which silently stationed itself in front of the port, two small, recently built and very swift craft were chosen. Lieut. Rizzo, a Sicilian, but thirty years old, was given command of both.

A little after midnight, the boats crept into the harbor mouth. The mist dimmed the Austrian searchlights, and the small draft of water of the vessels enabled them to avoid mines which would have been fatal to heavier ships. One of the side piers was reached without detection and found unguarded. Even with the powerful tools provided, it was a dangerous thing slowly to cut cables which if unduly shaken, might explode a whole series of mines. Nevertheless, this was done, even when it became necessary to grapple five of the hawsers which were under water, bring them to the surface and divide them strand by strand.

At length the cables gave way, the mines and nets supported by them sank to the bottom and there was open water straight to the Wien and the Monarch. The boats sped into it. A moment later two torpedoes from Rizzo's boat struck the Wien, which sank instantly. His quick signal to the following boat released two more, which wrecked the Monarch.

The explosions suggested to the Austrians that there was trouble somewhere. It could not be in the harbor, because of the impregnable cables and the mines. Therefore, they argued it must come from the air, as usual. Then the heavens were lit up with the glare of countless electric beams and light bombs, and the airship guns shelled the clouds, and the other Austrian vessels in the harbor, not seeing anything to fire at, enthusiastically bombarded the Adriatic.

But all this was harmless to Rizzo and his men. As the torpedoes struck home, Rizzo's crew shouted. And as their boats ran out of danger, they sang as only Italians can.

ON an eastbound train I went into the smoker and found Jefferson Peters, the only man with a brain west of the Wabash river who can use his cerebrum, cerebellum and medulla oblongata at the same time. Jeff is in the line of unillegal graft. He is not to be dreaded by widows and orphans; he is a reducer of surplusage. His favorite disguise is that of the target bird at which the spendthrift or the reckless investor may shy a few inconsequential dollars. He is readily vocalized by tobacco; so, with the aid of two thick and easy burning brevas, I got the story of his latest Autolycean adventure.

"In my line of business," said Jeff, "the hardest thing is to find an upright, trustworthy, strictly honorable partner to work a graft with. Some of the best men I ever worked with in a swindle would resort to trickery at times."

"So last summer I thinks I will go over into this section of country where I hear the serpent has not yet entered and see if I can find a partner naturally gifted with a talent for crime, but not yet contaminated by success.

"I found a village that seemed to show the right kind of a layout. The inhabitants hadn't found out that Adam had been dispossessed and were going right along naming the animals and killing snakes just as if they were in the garden of Eden. They call this town Mount Nebo, and it's up near the spot where Kentucky and West Virginia and North Carolina corner together. Them states don't meet? Well, it was in that neighborhood, anyway.

"After putting in a week proving I wasn't a revenue officer I went over to the store where the rude fourflushers of the hamlet lied, to see if I could get a line on the kind of man I wanted.

"Gentlemen," says I after we rubbed noses and gathered 'round the dried apple barrel, 'I don't suppose there's another community in the whole world into which sin and chicanery has less extensively permeated than this. Life here, where all the women are brave and propitious and all the men honest and expedient, must, indeed, be an idol. It reminds me,' says I, 'of Goldstein's beautiful ballad entitled "The Deserted Village," which says:

"'Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey;
What art can drive its charms away?
The judge rode slowly down the lane,
Mother,
For I'm to be queen of the May.'"

"Why, yes, Mr. Peters," says the storekeeper. 'I reckon we air about as moral and torpid a community as there be on the mounting, according to censuses of opinion, but I reckon you ain't ever met Rufe Tatum.'

"Worse," says the storekeeper. "He steals hogs."

"'Shucks, now,' says I in the mountain idiom, 'don't tell me there's a man in Mount Nebo as bad as that.'

"'Worse,' says the storekeeper. 'He steals hogs.'

"I thinks I will look up this Mr. Tatum. So a day or two after the constable turned him out I got acquainted with him and invited him out on the edge of town to sit on a log and talk business.

"What I wanted was a partner with a natural rural makeup to play a part in some little one act outrages that I was going to book with the Pittfall & Gin circuit in some of the western towns, and this R. Tatum was born for the role as sure as nature cast Fairbanks for the stuff that kept Eliza from sinking into the river.

"He was about the size of a first baseman, and he had ambiguous blue eyes like the china dog on the mantelpiece that Aunt Harriet used to play with when she was a child. His hair waved a little bit, like the statue of the dinkus thrower in the Vacation at Rome, but the color of it reminded you of the 'Sunset In the Grand Canyon,' by an American artist, that they hang over the stovepipe holes in the saloons. He was the Reub, without needing a touch. You'd have known him for one, even if you'd seen him on the vaudeville stage with one cotton suspender and a straw over his ear.

"I told him what I wanted and found him ready to jump at the job.

"Overlooking such a trivial little peccadillo as the habit of manslaughter," says I, 'what have you accomplished in the way of indirect brigandage or nonactionable thriftiness that you could point to, with or without pride, as an evidence of your qualifications for the position?'

"Why," says he in his kind of southern system of procrastinated accents, 'hain't you heard tell? There ain't any man, black or white, in the Blue Ridge that can tote off a shoat as easy as I can without bein' heard, seen or cotched. I can lift a shoat,' he goes on, 'out of a pen, from under a piazza, at the trough, in the woods, day or night, anywhere or anyhow, and I guarantee nobody won't hear a squeal. It's all in the way you grab hold of 'em and carry 'em afterward. Some day,' goes on this gentle despoiler of pigpens, 'I hope to become reckernized as the champion shoat stealer of the world.'

"It's proper to be ambitious," says I, 'and hog stealing will do very well for Mount Nebo, but in the outside world, Mr. Tatum, it would be considered as crude a piece of business as a bear raid on Bay State Gas. However, it will do as a guarantee of good faith. We'll go into partnership. I've got $1,000 cash capital, and with that homeward plods atmosphere of yours we ought to be able to win out a few shares of Soon Parted preferred in the money market.'

"So I attaches Rufe, and we go away from Mount Nebo down into the lowlands. And all the way I coach him for his part in the grafts I had in mind. I had fled away two months on the Florida coast and was feeling all to the Ponce de Leon, besides having so many new schemes up my sleeve that I had to wear kimonos to hold 'em.

"I intended to assume a funnel shape and mow a path nine miles wide through the farming belt of the middle west, so we headed in that direction. But when we got as far as Lexington we found Binkley Bros.' circus there and the blue grass peasantry romping into town and peending the Belgian blocks with their hand pegged sabots as artless and arbitrary as an extra session of a Datto Bryan duma. I never pass a circus without pulling the valve cord and coming down for a little Key West money, so I engaged a couple of rooms and board for Rufe and me at a house near the circus grounds run by a widow lady named Peevy. Then I took Rufe to a clothing store and gents' outfitted him. He showed up strong, as I knew he would, after he was rigged up in the ready-made rutabaga regalia. Me and old Misitzky stuffed him into a bright blue suit with a Nile green visible plaid effect and riveted on a fancy vest of a light Tuskegee normal tan color, a red necktie and the yellowest pair of shoes in town. They were the first clothes Rufe had ever worn except the gingham layette and the butternut top dressing of his native kraal, and he looked as self conscious as an Igorrote with a new nose ring.

"That night I went down to the circus tents and opened a small shell game. Rufe was to be the capper. I gave him a roll of phony currency to bet with and kept a bunch of it in a special pocket to pay his winnings out of. No, I didn't mistrust him, but I simply can't manipulate the ball to lose when I see real money bet. My fingers go on a strike every time I try it.

"I set up my little table and began to show them how easy it was to guess which shell the little pea was under. The unlettered hinds gathered in a thick semicircle and began to nudge elbows and banter one another to bet. Then was when Rufe ought to have singlefooted up and called the turn on the little joker for a few tens and fives to get them started. But no Rufe. I'd seen him two or three times walking about and looking at the sideshow pictures with his mouth full of peanut candy, but he never came nigh.

"The crowd piked a little, but trying to work the shells without a capper is like fishing without bait. I closed the game with only $42 of the unearned increment, while I had been counting on yanking the yeomen for $200 at least. I went home at 11 and went to bed. I supposed that the circus had proved too alluring for Rufe and that he had succumbed to it, concert and all, but I meant to give him a lecture on general business principles in the morning.

"Just after Morpheus had got both my shoulders to the shuck mattress I hears a houseful of unbecoming and ribald noises, like a youngster screeching with green apple colic. I opens my door and calls out in the hall for the widow lady, and when she sticks her head out I says, 'Mrs. Peevy, ma'am, would you mind choking off that kid of yours so that honest people can get their rest?'

" 'Sir,' says she, 'it's no child of mine. It's the pig squealing that your friend Mr. Tatum brought home to his room a couple of hours ago. And if you are uncle or second cousin or brother to it I'd appreciate your stopping its mouth, sir, yourself if you please.'

"I put on some of the polite outside habiliments of external society and went into Rufe's room. He had got up and lit his lamp and was pouring some milk into a tin pan on the floor for a dingy white half grown, squealing pig.

" 'How is this, Rufe?' says I. 'You flimflammed in your part of the work tonight and put the game on crutches. And how do you explain the pig? It looks like backsliding to me.'

" 'Now don't be too hard on me, Jeff,' says he. 'You know how long I've been used to stealing shoats. It's got to be a habit with me. And tonight, when I see such a fine chance, I couldn't help takin' it.'

" 'Well,' says I, 'maybe you're real got kleptopigia. And maybe when we get out of the pig belt you'll turn your mind to higher and more remunerative misconduct. Why you should want to stab your soul with such a distasteful, feeble minded, perverted, roaring beast as that I can't understand.'

" 'Why, Jeff,' says he, 'you ain't in sympathy with shoats. You don't understand 'em like I do. This here seems to me to be an animal of more than common powers of ratiocination and intelligence. He walked half across the room on his hind legs awhile ago.'

" 'Well, I'm going back to bed,' says I. 'See if you can impress it upon your friend's ideas of intelligence that he's not to make so much noise.'

" 'He was hungry,' says Rufe. 'He'll go to sleep and keep quiet now.'

"I always get up before breakfast and read the morning paper whenever I happen to be within the radius of a Hoe cylinder or a Washington hand press. The next morning I got up early and found the Lexington daily on the front porch where the carrier had thrown it. The first thing I saw in it was a double column ad. on the front page that read like this:

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS REWARD.

The above amount will be paid, and no questions asked, for the return, alive and uninjured, of Beppo, the famous European educated pig, that strayed or was stolen from the sideshow tents of Binkley Bros. circus last night.

GEO. B. TAPLEY, Business Manager, at the Circus Grounds.

"I folded up the paper flat, put it into my inside pocket and went to Rufe's room. He was nearly dressed and was feeding the pig the rest of the milk and some apple peelings.

" 'Well, well, well, good morning all,' I says, hearty and amiable. 'So we are up? And piggy is havin' his breakfast. What had you intended doing with that pig, Rufe?"

" 'I'm going to crate him up,' says Rufe, 'and express him to ma in Mount Nebo. He'll be company for her while I am away.'

" 'He's a mighty fine pig,' says I, scratching him on the back.

" 'You called him a lot of names last night,' says Rufe.

" 'Oh, well,' says I, 'he looks better to me this morning. I was raised on a farm, and I'm very fond of pigs. I used to go to bed at sundown, so I never saw one by lamplight before.

Tell you what I'll do, Rufe,' I says. 'I'll give you $10 for that pig.'

" 'I reckon I wouldn't sell this shoat,' says he. 'If it was any other one I might.'

" 'Why not this one?' I asked, fearful that he might know something.

" 'Why, because,' says he, 'it was the grandest achievement of my life. There ain't alry other man that could have done it. If I ever have a fireside and children I'll sit beside it and tell 'em how their daddy toted off a shoat from a whole circus full of people. And maybe my grandchildren too. They'll certainly be proud a whole passel. Why,' says he, 'there was two tents, one openin' into the other. This shoat was on a platform tied with a little chain. I seen a giant and a lady with a fine chance of bushy white hair in the other tent. I got the shoat and crawled out from under the canvas again without him squeakin' as loud as a mouse. I put him under my coat, and I must have passed a hundred folks before I got out where the streets was dark. I reckon I wouldn't sell that shoat, Jeff. I'd want ma to keep it, so there'd be a witness to what I done.'

" 'The pig won't live long enough,' I says, 'to use as an exhibit in your senile fireside mendacity. Your grandchildren will have to take your word for it. I'll give you $100 for the animal.'

"Rufe looked at me astonished. 'The shoat can't be worth anything like that to you,' he says. 'What do you want him for?'

" 'Viewing me casuistically,' says I, with a rare smile, 'you wouldn't think that I've got an artistic side to my temper. But I have. I'm a collector of pigs. I've scoured the world for unusual pigs. Over in the Wabash valley I've got a hog ranch with most every specimen on it, from a Merino to a Poland China. This looks like a blooded pig to me, Rufe,' says I. 'I believe it's a genuine Berkshire. That's why I'd like to have it.'

" 'I'd shore like to accommodate you,' says he, 'but I've got the artistic temperament too. I don't see why it ain't art when you can steal a shoat better than anybody else can. Shoats is a kind of inspiration and genius with me. Specially this one. I wouldn't take two hundred and fifty for that animal.'

" 'Now listen,' says I, wiping off my forehead. 'It's not so much a matter of business with me as it is art, and not so much art as it is philanthropy. Being a connoisseur and disseminator of pigs, I wouldn't feel like I'd done my duty to the world unless I added that Berkshire to my collection. Not intrinsically, but according to the ethics of pigs as friends and coadjutors of mankind. I offer you $500 for the animal.'

" 'Jeff,' says this pork esthete, 'it ain't money; it's sentiment with me.'

"Seven hundred," says I.
 "Make it eight hundred," says Rufe, "and I'll crush the sentiment out of my heart."

"I went under my clothes for my money belt and counted him out forty twenty-dollar gold certificates."

"I'll just take him into my own room," says I, "and lock him up till after breakfast."

"I took the pig by the hind leg. He turned on a squeal like the steam calliope at the circus."

"Let me tote him in for you," says Rufe, and he picks up the beast under one arm, holding his snout with the other hand, and packs him into my room like a sleeping baby."

"After breakfast Rufe, who had a chronic case of haberdashery ever since I got his trousseau, says he believes he will amble down to Misfitzy's and look over some royal purple socks. And then I got as busy as a one armed man with the nettle rash pasting on wallpaper. I found an old negro man with an express wagon to hire, and we tied the pig in a sack and drove down to the circus grounds."

"I found George B. Tapley in a little tent with a window flap open. He was a fattish man, with an immediate eye, in a black skullcap, with a four ounce diamond screwed into the bosom of his red sweater."

"Are you George B. Tapley?" I ask.
 "I swear it," says he.

"Well, I've got it," says I.
 "Designate," says he. "Are you the guinea pigs for the Asiatic python or the alfalfa for the sacred buffalo?"

"Neither," says I. "I've got Beppo, the educated hog, in a sack in that wagon. I found him rooting up the flowers in my front yard this morning. I'll take the $5,000 in large bills if it's handy."

"George B. hustles out of his tent and asks me to follow. We got into one of the side shows. In there was a jet black pig, with a pink ribbon around his neck, lying on some hay and eating carrots that a man was feeding to him."

"Hey, Mac," calls G. B. "Nothing wrong with the worldwide this morning, is there?"

"Him? No," says the man. "He's got an appetite like a chorus girl at 1 a. m."

"How'd did you get this pipe?" says Tapley to me. "Eating too many pork chops last night?"

"I pulls out the paper and shows him the ad."

"Fake," says he. "Don't know anything about it. You've beheld with your own eyes the marvelous, worldwide porcine wonder of our four footed kingdom eating with preternatural sagacity his matutinal meal, unstrayed and unstole. Good morning."

"I was beginning to see. I got in the wagon and told Uncle Ned to drive to the most adjacent orifice of the nearest alley. There I took out my pig, got the range carefully for the other opening, set his sights and gave him such a kick that he went out the other end of the alley twenty feet ahead of his squeal."

"Then I paid Uncle Ned his 50 cents and walked down to the newspaper office. I wanted to hear it in cold syllables. I got the advertising man to his window."

"To decide a bet," says I, "wasn't the man who had this ad. put in last night short and fat, with long whiskers and a club foot?"

"He was not," says the man. "He would measure about six feet by four and a half inches, with cornslike hair and dressed like the pansies of the conservatory."

"At dinner time I went back to Mrs. Peevy's."

"Shall I keep some soup hot for Mr. Tatum till he comes back?" she asks.

"If you do, ma'am," says I, "you'll more than exhaust for firewood all the coal in the bosom of the earth and all the forests on the outside of it."

"So there, you see," said Jefferson Peters in conclusion, "how hard it is ever to find a fair minded and honest business partner."

"But," I began, with the freedom of long acquaintance, "the rule should work both ways. If you had offered to divide the reward you would not have lost!"

Jeff's look of dignified reproach stopped me.

"That don't involve the same principles at all," said he. "Mine was a legitimate and moral attempt at speculation. Buy low and sell high. Don't Wall street indorse it? Bulls and bears and pigs—what's the difference? Why not bristles as well as horns and fur?"

A Monorail Ride.

Buttinsky, who heard some travelling men talking about the monorail, adopted his usual tactics.

"I rode on one of those once," he piped in.

"Rode on what?"

"A single rail."

"I'll bet you did," replied one of the drummers, "and I'll also bet there was a man carrying each end of the rail."—Judge.

Hawker and Grieve, the two aviators who started on a non-stop trip across the Atlantic and who were given up for lost, were picked up by a freight steamer. They had travelled far enough, nearly, to land them in Ireland but met with mechanical difficulties which forced them to the water.

TRIVERS

Mr. Potter, the Travers-Champion stage man, brings over the daily paper every day and they can be had at J. M. Murphy's store.

Every incoming train brings in more men and supplies for the irrigation company's extension work.

Since the strike Mr. Murphy has been shipping in his cream across country from Champion, while Mr. Hanson drove to Lethbridge for his supply.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Sheridan of Barons were visitors here this week.

The high winds had just about caught our goat, but everything is looking up now since the glorious rains.

Travers was shut out from playing at Lomond on Thursday on account of the rains. We'll give up a ball game any day for a rain. Lomond plays here June 5th. There will be a big dance in Paulson's Hall after the game.

Most of Travers went to Champion on the 24th, taking in the ball game and the dance. The Standard Bank staff was among those in attendance.

The movies from now on will be held on Tuesday evenings, so that the people can come for their mail and attend the show all in one trip. The picture for next Tuesday is entitled "Anything Once." Don't forget the change in the night.

The Ford garage is undergoing some improvements. The accessory department is being enlarged and a fine show room arranged.

Miss Teskey and Mr. Johnson of Okotoks were callers at the Branscombe's on the 24th.

Hon. A. J. McLean, minister of public works and member for this riding, accompanied by Mr. Ainsworth of Lethbridge, road supervisor, were driving through the district this week looking up the weak spots in the roads.

Mrs. Alex Clask and Mrs. Guy Paulson were visitors to the Hat this week.

M. T. Purcell went to Brooks this week. He was accompanied by C. Landon and Thos. Johnson, the latter going on from there to Medicine Hat.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hanson motored to their farm at Alderson last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Buchan and Miss McKay were in Lethbridge on the 24th.

Purcells Ltd. received a fresh supply of green vegetables last train, and this along with fresh fruits makes a very attractive window display.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan McLean spent the week-end in Lethbridge, Hotel Worth being left in the hands of the Sheridan girls during their absence.

Jack Bain went to Lethbridge this week to see his new born son.

The Ogilvie repair gang is now working here, under the supervision of the auditor, Mr. Terry.

Circular No 17 of the Dominion Experimental Farms shows that seeds of a good many varieties of vegetables can be grown at home of as good quality than is the imported seed. To insure having good seed however, it should be produced from best plants of the crop instead of those that happen to be left unused. This publication which is entitled "Every Farmer His Own Seed Grower", is obtainable from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa and tells how to grow, care and select such garden crops as beans, corn, cucumbers, egg plants, lettuce, melons, parsley, peppers, peas, radish, tomatoes, and some other crops.
